We heard firing away to our right, and speculation was indulged in as to what

My company was put upon the picket- rear.

HE WAS A SPLENDID SOLDIER.

It was very still. A little creek ran along in front of us, and we were told the enemy was just on the other side; the nothing. The men were very anxious. They all knew that at the expiration of one hour we were to fall back. What did it mean? Some thought we were left to give the alarm of an advance and be gobbled by the enemy.

As I passed along the line anxious inquiries as to the time were made. The Lieutenant was as much concerned as any of us, and to relieve the suspense would have been glad to give the order to retire, but he was too good a soldier to shorten the time one minute.

THE EXCITEMENT BECAME INTENSE. the company was deployed as skirmishers | a good quieting agent. and marched back over the ground we In the morning many who had been tered over the place. They would grasp them by the stock and strike the muzzle upon the ground, breaking them at the small of the stock.

This was an indication that we were abandoning the ground. We moved to the river, and crossing over found our regiment just preparing to go into camp. We joined, and made coffee, which, with some hardtack, we managed to get quite

It began to rain soon after getting well fixed for sleep, and the ground soon became a mudhole. It rained all night, and the next morning we moved over the same ground we had occupied the day before, across the creek, where we had been on picket, and over the enemy's temporary works, which they deserted as we advanced, and into a large field.

The corps was formed in this field in column of divisions, there being three divisions. There were three lines-of-battle, which presented a MAGNIFICENT SIGRT. the formation. Regiments, brigades, and terrible. divisions were formed as prescribed by At Fredericksburg we took possession who encountered the enemy in the woods short time the men were in our front. Three companies on the back, connecting with the next line in the rear, so forming a line to protect the left flank. The artillery soon came into play on both sides, and for a time the cannonading was terrific. At first the enemy were sending their missiles over and beyond us, but they soon got our range and exploded their shells directly over us. We were lying down, and becoming tired of hugging the ground so | With leave; at rest so well be hears no sound close, I had partly raised myself, and was Ovulling Summer winds, nor fiercest shrick watching the effects of the connonade. when a shell exploded in our immediate front, scattering its fragments upon us.

I COULD FEEL THE WIND OF THE MIS-

SILIS AS THEY SWEPT BY ME.

terial at hand, we were soon in good much more serious than it would have shape to receive the enemy, in case he been on any other part of the line. One should attempt to attack us. After get- or two men were killed and several ting fixed, the time hung heavy on our wounded, myself among the latter, a hands. All sorts of reports came to us. fragment having struck my under jaw,

BADLY SHATTERING IT. Seeing I was seriously hurt, the Lieutenant commanding ordered me to the line with instructions to remain one hour, At this time the enemy had run out then retire. This was at 4 o'clock. The a battery of artillery on our left flank, line was very strong. The intervals be- and about the time I started to the rear tween the men were but two yards. We they opened a heavy enfilading fire. lay down, and with the loose stone built | As I ran back I thought every gun was something like protection for ourselves. aimed at me. They fired three volleys | Europe) was about to honor Littlethorpe | ly a man or woman in the assembly who did and feel the wind of the missiles as they swept by me. It was a great wonder I escaped.

behind a hill to investigate me, but the ters, which was a large house. Just then the battery began to send him checked that by bringing a squad of grimed with mud, rumbled through the about 300 prisoners in view. The artilanother direction.

and by this time I had become so weak The ambulance carried me to the divis- wondering comment among those who wit- bim already; I can quell him with my eye. ion field hospital, which was established at a large plantation. All the buildings were occupied by the Surgeons, and obliged to stay out of doors, from the rain. A newspaper reporter was at the gate, who took the name, rank, and regiment of all who came. Soon the men began to come in AMBULANCE LOADS getting to the hospital. Among them were many of my regiment.

It begun to grow dark. The Surgeons were working like beavers by the light of flickering candles. The legs and arms they were amputating accumulated in We watched the banks of the creek piles. The grounds were covered with opposite, expecting every moment to see | wounded men, groaning, swearing, de the enemy burst through the brush on a lirious. A noticeable thing was that all rapid advance. But to our relief none who were brought out of the Surgeons' came, and when the time had expired quarters were very still; choloform is operated upon were found dead. I We found the regiment had gone. shall never forget the horrors of that We passed where there had been some night in the field hospital. As soon as all the splender of gold and silver tinsel, fighting the day before, and found de- it could be got ready, an ambulance waving banners, and tawdry finery, accomtails of men breaking up the guns scat- train was loaded with those who could panied by the blare and crash of a brass

SCATTERING ITS FRAGMENTS UPON US not walk, and started for Fredericksburg, accompanied by those of the wounded strong enough to travel on foot. We soon struck the plank-road, from which the planks had been removed except every third one. There then resume his weary round. was, owing to the heavy rains, no way Our position was in the first line, on the for the ambulances except over this road. as to the extent of ground he could cover, her. extreme left, which was on the highest The mud was so deep it was almost impoint in the field, and which gave us the possible to travel, and the sufferings of out of sorts. Signor Farrelli slept through opportunity to see every organization in the poor fellows who had to ride were it all. An occasional growt or a snarl did

eral officers and their staffs, and the ourselves as comfortable as possible. eyes long lines of men, were spread out like | The next day we were notified that all thousand prisoners were corraled in a missed it with an impatient "Pshaw!" and depression in the ground and guarded sprang to his feet. Lounging across the tent, by several batteries of artillery and a contained the latest addition to the menagregiment of infantry. The guns were eric. It was a black panther, a full-grown loaded with grape and canister and the specimen of this somewhat rare variety, gunners at their posts, ready to send death into the mass if an attempt should at taming the brute; but as yet, though his be made at a revolt.

STRUNG OUT FOR MILES.

On arriving at Belle Plain I found the Sanitary and Christian Commissions agents had established depots for the relief of the wounded. Coffee, tea, milkpunch were there for the comfort of the inner man, besides shirts, stockings, bandages and supplies of all kinds. were directed to two steamers at the end of a long wharf.

On our arrival at Washington there awaited us a short ride in the ambulance to Lincoln Hospital, a bath, clean clothes, a clean bed and a long-needed

IN MEMORIAM-A STRAGGLER OF '63 BY ALBERT C. HOPKINS, HOT SPRINGS, S. D.

Beside the line-of-march of '63, I find a lonely, sunken grave, unmarked: Yet well I know the soldier sleeping here; A comrade brave as any hero dead Or living, foot-sore, weary, fallen out Of the November blast.

A bloody field is 'round about him, but The grass grows green, and graceful trees at!!! woo We were lying in the angle formed by The breeze to music whose sweet words are, "Rest; the front and flank lines, and in consequence a larger space was occupied by the men. The effect of the shell was His fame is bright with laurel, for all time.

have deemed Littlethorpe worthy of such a pence. A cavalryman who was one of the two important centers. Therefore, with the and again approached the cage of the black provost-guard came out from his cover triple object of resting his horses, holding a panther. Somehow, it seemed as if an irrefire of the battery was too heavy for cided upon a one-day's sojourn. On their could just distinguish the red glare of the him, and he gave up the attempt. I part, the public in general displayed a due creature's eyes as it crouched down in a remember-when I went into the tent, ready passed Gen. Burnside at his Headquar- appreciation of his laudable intentions, and corner. prepared to accord the show a vociferous

In the early hours of the morning, the | eh?' their compliments, but the General soon | great, cumbrous wagons, plentifully bestreets, and filed off one by one toward the lerymen soon turned their guns in lishments which adorned the sides, repre- | sort of intimate terms. senting riderless horses careering through somewhat reminded one of the natural char- in which the panther lay. acteristics of an östrich-alighting on the circular, the other oblong, were struggling Oh, no; it isn't the panther that I mind: all sorts of contrivances were improvised | to maintain their upright position in the | but" brush was very thick, and we could see to protect the wounded, who were face of a pretty stiff breeze, which threatened every moment to level them to the ground. Strings of horses, spotted and speckled like the patriarch Jacob's kine, and, judging by the roar after roar that panther." and on foot, until it seemed a greater came from the zoological section of the part of the corps was wounded and show, an erstwhile king of the forest was Two or three flaring naptha lamps, suspend-stood in front of the lions' cage, never adclamoring loudly for his.

HE LAY STRETCHED FACE DOWNWARD ON A PILE OF STRAW.

Punctually at noon the grand mid-day procession set out to parade the streets, in band. The market-place was deserted save for one or two swarthy attendants, who luck to fall foul of that man Vallard. It lounged in and out of the tents. Occasionally, above the distant strains of the band, could be heard a trantic shout of delight from the multitude who witnessed the pro-

The oblong tent was set apart for the menagerie. Inside, the close, fetid atmosphere seemed to have a drowsy effect upon the solitary custodian, for he lay stretched face downward on a pile of straw in the carner, his head pillowed upon his arms, The great breadth of back, the girt and s newy hardness of his powerful limbs, proc a med him to be a veritable Hercules. He was none other than the renowned and much-advertised lion-tamer, Signor Petro Farrelli; otherwise, plain Peter Farrell.

At the further end of the tent stood a long country lass of yours, to my knowledge." cage, capable of being divided into two compartments by means of a sliding barrier. It contained the lions. Gaunt, skinny, hungry looking brutes they were, the bones sticking | was over, I set out for a quiet ramble through out sharply through their tawny hides. the streets. I wandered on through slums From end to end of the cage they moped, in and alleys, until I got down close to the a ceaseless, monotonous tramp, like restless river. spirits who know no peace. Every minute or so one of them would rear up his head suddenly and glare through the bars, as if contemplating an imaginary crowd, and

The Polar bear seemed to vie with them not appear to disturb the quietude of his slumber. But when the two hyenas became Casev's Tactics. The bright colors of of the buildings that were best adapted bone of a horse, he raised his massive head, the flags and the uniforms of the gen- for hospital use, and proceeded to make and glowered around the tent with sleepy

With a sudden twist of the body he rolled a grand panerama before us. I think who could walk should start for Belle there contemplating the fluttering canvas Gen. Casey would have been highly Plain, a distance of 10 miles, where we overhead. Then he indulged in a mighty gratified to see the beautiful picture his | would find transportation for Washing- | yawn, shook himself, and sat upright. In a system of tactical formation produced ton. All who were able were soon on the the heap, and began toying with it indolently. listless sort of way he plucked a straw from way. Those whose feet and legs were His manner was thoughtful and preoccupied; The action opened by our skirmishers, good soon distanced the others, and in a it almost seemed as if he had something on his mind-something, perhaps, which had been suggested to him in his sleep, left of each line-of-battle were thrown Within a mile of our destination several five minutes' grave consideration, he dishe went up and stood before a cage which known to be the most ferocious of the whole species. Farrelli had been trying his hand reckless daring often prompted him to foolcage for more than a second or two at a gliding motion of a cat, the fierce beast kept and regarded him with savage, blinking eyes, With his face close to the bars, Farrelli watched every movement of the animal, as if Nurses dressed the wounds of the men. each had a significance which he alone un-As soon as we were provided for we derstood. Then he seemed to drop back into self into my arms or something of that sort. a reverie; and in this fit of abstraction he with the straw in his hand. A loud shout outside, the cracking of whips and rumble of wagons, announced the return of the procession. The liontamer swung round on his heel, and stalked off to prepare for the afternoon performance. As he moved away the black panther stood still, with head creet, and glared after him in a way that suggested implacable hatred.

An hour or so later, the tent was densely whip, and marched boldiy up to the lions' den, the hush of awe fell upon the spectators. round and round the cage, made them leap prising feats, all of which elicited shouts of return. applause from the multitude. The display wound up with what was designated "a lion hunt," in which there was a tremendous flashing and banging of pistols, and a wild

the corners. When it was all over, and the tamer had backed out of the cage, the manager mounted the steps to address the crowd. He extended a cordial invitation to all present to attend | stone, or else the current whipped him away the performance that evening, promising out of sight, for I never set eyes on him

Stedman's world-famed Hippodrome and | them that, among other marvellous attrac-Menagerie (which, as might be gathered tions, they would witness an extraordinary from the flaring posters that enlivened all and unique feat of daring on the part of the dead-walls of the town, had been pat- the celebrated Signor Petro Farrelli. He so ronized by several of the crowned heads of | worked upon their curiosity, there was scarcebefore I reached cover. I could hear with a visit. Not that, in an ordinary way, not resolve to avail themselves of the opporthe proprietor of this regal show would | tunity, even if it cost them their last six-distinction; but, as he took care to give out, In the interval, after the animals had been it was a convenient halting-place between | fed, Farrelli wandered into the deserted tent, | mess uncommonly well. I never heard of couple of full-dress rehearsals, and affording sistible impulse drew him to that spot. It the whole thing seemed to have blown over the inhabitants a treat of a lifetime, he de- was growing dark new, and in the gloom he quietly,

"Halloa! Signor Petro," cried someone

Farrelli turned round sharply, and found himself face-to-face with the ring-master,

I found an ambulance at the river, the air, and ladies-whose fantastic garb | tinued Radford, pointing to the dark recess | some strange whim on her part, for women

"Afraid? No!" returned Petro, confrom less of blood I could hardly walk. bare backs of the fiery steeds, evoked much temptuously. "I've got the mastery over nessed the procession from the neighboring | Besides," he went on, vehemently, "if he | did a while ago. The strange part of it was cuts up rough, I could strangle the brute | she seemed anxious to avoid me the moment By 10 o'clock two enormous tents, one before he had time to get his claws into me. my performance with the lions was over. I

"But what?" "I'm afraid of that woman!" "What woman?"

"Come outside, Mark, said Farrelli, taking were led down to the river, followed by an his friend by the arm, as if impelled to conenthusiastic and admiring crowd. The mem- fide in him. "I'll tell you the whole story bers of the equestrian troupe wandered off | right off, and then you can judge whether I through the town in search of breakfast; have cause to feel a bit uneasy about the

They strolled out of the tent arm in arm. around the entrance, glimmering faintly upon a row of intent, eager faces in the back- to live for. ground. The two men turned aside, and

"You remember that fellow Vallard, convinced the other there was some startling women generally have a queer way of redisclosure coming.

"Should think I do," replied Radford; "'Rowdy Vallard,' we used to call him. A good bare-back rider, but a desperately cantankerous, quarrelsome sort of fellow. He left us very suddenly, too; and no one seemed to know what became of him."

"Yes," muttered Farrelli, "that's so. Well," he went on sternly, "you'll hear now what befell him. When we were running the show up in York last Winter, I had the illwas about a girl. I had noticed her hanging around the circus for two or three dayswanted to become a rider, or something of the kind. I managed to strike up an acquaintance with her. She told me her name was Florence Mayhew, and bit by bit it came out that she had a sweetheart in the show. But for the life of me, though I kept nagging at her about it, I couldn't get her to say which of us it was. I thought of you, Mark; it struck me that a good-looking, sixfoot chap like you was that the sort of fellow to take a girl's fancy. And, as I brooded over this notion, I believe I was almost beginning to hate you."

"Stuff and nonsense, old man!" interposed Radford. "I never set eyes upon this north-"I know, I know," Farrelli replied, hastily.

'I was mistaken : got on an entirely wrong

"It was a dismal and deserted spot. As I looked around, I saw a man and a woman long run. I was completely in the dark; on ahead. I knew at once who they were-Vailard and Florence Mayhew. Her secret was out now; but I couldn't help wonder- on regularly week after week I felt that I ing what she saw in that brute to attract

"They seemed to be wrangling about something. Suddenly they stopped short, as if hardy feats, he had never ventured into the to argue the matter out. While I stood watching them, I saw Vallard raise his hand to strike the girl. My blood boiled, Mark; Striding up and down, with the stealthy, the next second I was at his side, and flung him on the flat of his back in the mud. He its head persistently turned toward the man, got up and went for me foriously. We had a stand-up fight; and-well, he came off second best,' as we say in Ireland.

"STRIKING IDLY AT THE PANTHER WITH THE STRAW."

"When it was all over I turned towards She gave me a look-you should have seen commenced striking idly at the panther it, Mark-and flew at me like a tigress. Good heavens! I little guessed what a demon was in that woman! She screamed with passion; she tore at me savagely, and shouted that I had killed her sweetheart. I shook her off, and left them to square matters up between themselves.

"I took a smart turn of a mile or two along by the river, for I felt a bit ruffled, and wanted to walk it off. I was coming back slowly, not minding much how I went, packed from end to end. When Farrelli | when I came upon a huge pile of timber appeared on the scene, armed with his short stacked up on the bank. Just as I passed, a man sprang out upon me with a knife in his hand. It was Vallard. He made a He proceeded to lash the cowed brutes savage blow at me, but I managed to twist myself out of the way in the nick of time, through hoops of fire, and perform other sur- and let him have a heavy right-hander in

"He dropped the knife and reeled back as if half stunned. His heel caught in a stray log; he tried bard to keep his feet, clawing the air with his hands as his body skurry on the part of the beasts to get into swaved out over the brink. Then, before I could reach him, down he went into the river! "I rushed to the side and peered over. He must have gone to the bottom like a Is the best-in fact the One True Blood Purifier again. I tore up and down the bank, shouthearing. I stood still to listen for a cry from the drowning man. The only sound gurgling of the water.

"I gave up the search at last, and went that night I sat in my room thinking the caves in. matter out. I came to the conclusion there

"A day or two laier the girl turned up at the show, and began to make inquiries about Vallard. One evening I happened to meet her; she stopped and looked at me-and upon my word, Mark, I never got a worse look from any of those savage brutes over there. I believe she partly guessed that I had a hand in her lover's disappearance. "Shortly after that we went on tour, and I was beginning to think I had got out of the Vallard's body being recovered; there was no mention of the affair in the papers, and

"One night-it was at Huddersfield, I for my turn, the first person I laid eyes on was Florence Mayhew. What on earth behind him. "Taking stock of that beauty, brought her there? I wondered. She was standing in the front row, just like an ordinary spectator, but it was easy to see by her looks she had some special reason of her own Mark Radford, the only member of the for being present. All the time I was in market-place. The faded pictorial embel- whole troupe with whom he was upon any the cage with the lions I felt that those dark eyes of hers were glued upon me. I didn't "You're not afraid of him, are you?" con- | mind it much at first-thought it was only sometimes take queer fancies into their heads, you know, Mark.

"But the very next night she was there again, watching me like that black panther couldn't for the life of me make out what she was up to; it worried me; and, to tell the truth, Mark, I didn't altogether like the

"We moved on to another town. Well, I was done with the girl now, at any rate, I told myself. Not a bit of it! She turned up at the evening performance, went through the same part, and disappeared. Next day the show was at Stalybridge; and Florence Mayhew was there, too. Night after night, no matter where we went, she came and ed from poles, threw a broad fringe of light | dressing a word to anyone, but watching me through the bars as if that was all she had

"I tell you, Mark, her presence there wandered off into the darkness. When they every night was beginning to have a queer came to the low wall which bounded the effect on me. It was like that trick of letmarket-place, Farrelli stood still and listened. | ting water drip onto your hand-you think Then, as if assured that they were alone, he nothing of it at first; you feel quite sure seated himself upon the edge of the wall you can stand it all right; but you cave in mighty soon, for all that,

"I was getting to dread that girl, because Mark?" he said, with a seriousness that I knew she had a grudge against me; and scent. One night, when the performance | venging themselves. What she was driving at, what her motive was in fellowing me about from town to town, was a constant worry to me. To be haunted in this fashion, without having the faintest notion of what it meant, is bound to tell upon you in the that was the worst of it.

"DOWN HE WENT INTO THE RIVER."

"When this sort of thing had been going must get at the bottom of it somehow. sat down in the tent one night after the performance was over, determined to puzzle the matter out. Bit by bit I got at the truth. I understood the meaning of it all now; I saw what that she-devil was up to. Good heavens! Mark, it gave me a creepy sort of feeling in spite of myself. No one but a woman could have hit upon such an extraordinary way of gratifying her malice, and set about it in this cold-blooded fashion. "What was it?" demanded Radford, with an eagerness which showed a deep interest in Farrelli's singular story.

"Just this: I needn't tell you that when man steps in among the lions he requires to have all his wits about him. It is a ticklish business, no matter what people may say. Your eyes must be in each corner of the cage at the same time, watching every twist and turn of the brutes. If your attention should be drawn off for a single instant you are done for! And that is what the woman was trying to do!"

He got off the wall, took his friend by the arm, and the two began pacing slowly up

"If you had known her, Mark," he went on, thoughfully, "you wouldn't wonder at her doing a thing of this kind. You see, it was an easy way of seeking to revenge herself upon me; all she had to do was to watch and wait. She must have felt that the very fact of keeping her eyes steadily fixed take effect sooner or later. And she was right. More than once I caught myself on the very point of looking round at her. I had to fight against the impulse; it was dragging at me from the moment I entered the cage-and every night it seemed to be growing stronger."

"What did you do to get rid of her?" "Nothing. At first, in a sudden burst of rage, I made up my mind to wait for her outside the tent the next evening, and strangle her on the spot. Then something prompted me to fight it out with her, and not give her the satisfaction of knowing that she had got the better of me in any way. I have stuck to that ever since; and this silent, deadly struggle is still going on between that woman and myself. How it will end, God only knows."

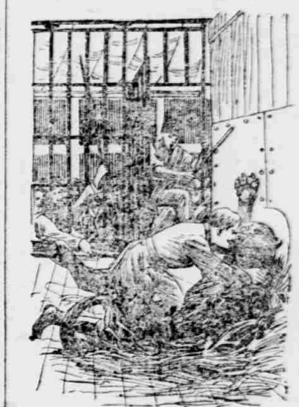

Absolute, perfect, permanent cures, even after other medicines have utterly failed, have given Hood's Sarsaparilla the first place among medicines and the largest sales in the world.

Sarsaparilla

ing for help, but there wasn't a soul within turned out?" cried Ranford, vehemently, that. This thing is bound to run its course | the floor and staggered out of the cage.

"Well, Peter, if I were in your place, was nothing to be gained by making a fuss I'd be long sorry to risk my life in this way. over it, and determined to keep my own | merely for the sake of spiting a woman."

remember, Mark, it was by my hand her lover met his death-though it was done in self-defense-and I won't deprive her of the that relentless enemy of his. chance of requiting me for it, if she can, I can pretty well defy her so long as I stick to the lions only; I've got such a hold over the brutes by this time that I feel fairly at home with them. But the first night it falls to my lot to enter one of the other cages, where I'm not at all so sure of my ground, and have to watch every twist of the tail, every blink of the eye, it will be quite a different matter then. That's the reason I don't feel easy in my mind about the panther. And do you know, Mark," he added, pulling his companion up suddenly, "it's a queer idea, but when I watch that creature prowling about his cage, it almost seems to me as if the woman had bewitched him. They both appear to regard me with the same deadly enmity; he looks at me exactly as she does,"

"MAN AND BEAST ROLLED TOGETHER ON THE FLOOR."

"Peter," said his friend, sententiously, 'you're not yourself, old man. You let this thing prey upon your mind too much. What you want is a good stiff dose of brandy. That will spirit you up, I'll be bound. So come along, and I'll administer the remedy."

The two men disappeared through the darkness, and did not return until they had to push their way through the surging crowd that swarmed around the tents. The band had already struck up; and, thrilled by its strains, the people fought desperately for tickets. Excitement and expectation were in the air; Stedman's grand show was about to display its many attractions.

Farrelli parted from his friend, and each branched off to their respective tents. The circus took the lead in the entertainment; but the moment it was over there was a rush for the menagerie. The crowd seemed to think that the best part of the performance was yet to come; for lions, tigers, and byenas were not seen every day in Littlethorpe. The spacious tent was crammed to its utmost extent. The dromedary came in for a good deal of attention, and the wiley elechant fared sumptuously upon biscuits and cakes. The greedy little eyes of the monkeys gleamed with delight at the many hands stretched out with nuts, while the brown bear devoured buns with befitting In the midst of the merriment there was a sudden lull, the crowd began to sway and surge forward toward the rope which was stretched across the further end of the tent. All eyes were turned expectantly in the direction of the lions. Signor Farrelli appeared upon the scene, his tight-fitting costume displaying to advantage his massive chest and the great swelling muscles of his powerful limbs. He shot a keen, searching glance through the crowd in front; and then, with a jaunty air, stepped briskly into the cage. He was greeted with a roar that shook the tent, and made the spectators feel they were getting good value for their money. The lashing and scramble commenced; the lions growled and suiked, but Farrelli drove them round with his whip, and sent them backwards and forwards through the hoops. The burning of red lights and flashing of firearms followed, at the conclusion of which the tamer emerged triumphantly from the cage.

The event of the evening was now about to take place. The spectators were prepared for something with a strong dash of danger in it; something that could be talked over with wonder and admiration for months

The manager mounted a stool, and, with a hand on each hip, proceeded to announce: "Ladies and gentlemen, Signor Farrelli will now perform a feat of daring hitherto unattempted by any tamer in Europe or America. In the cage to the left you see a specimen of the fierce black panther, or jaguar, an animal which, in its native state, roams the tangled forests of South America in search of its prey. Signor Farrelli will enter the panther's cage in your presence, and thereby demonstrate the dominion which man is capable of exercising over the most ferocious of the brute creation."

The assembly cheered; Signor Farrelli bowed. He whispered a few words to the manager, and moved away towards the cage. The panther was prowling up and down, watching the crowd with a sort of wondering interest. As Farrelli approached, the beast paused in the midst of a stride, and glared at him defiantly. The tamer mounted the steps fearlessly, the spring lock of the wicket clicked, and the next second he had slipped into the cage.

With a savage growl the panther whisked round and crouched against the opposite wall. At one side stood the man, erect, motionless, undanted, in the full consciousness of his mighty strength and indomitable will; at the other the infuriated beast cowered, its body quivering with rage, the small ears laid flat with the head, and the tail flapping against the floor. The spectators kept perfectly still, and looked on with bated breath. It almost seemed as if a sound-a motion-would break the spell which held man and beast apart. The tension was so great that even a stifled exclamation might cause it to snap. Suddenly there was a slight movement in the center of the crowd, and a woman pushed her way to the front. Those who were closest to the cage saw a strange look appear at that instant upon Farrelli's face; he grew deathly pale; his features twitched convulsively, and for one-half second his eyes were withdrawn from his enemy. It was enough! The spell was broken; with a terrific roar the panther shot into the air! Farrelli saw it coming; saw the great jaws extended, and the gleam of the fierce white teeth. On the spur of the moment he thrust his left hand into the gaping mouth, while with his right he gripped the brute by the chest, the savage claws were dug into his flesh; then, with a crash, man and beast went down, and rolled together on the floor. A shudder ran through the horrified crowd; the women screamed and fainted; the men Hood's Pills care Liver lits; easy to encounter. Two attendants came running WANTED-By Theo. L. Granvier, 32 Steuben agitated faces, as if fascinated by that deadly encounter record from decrease in the shemasters.

WANTED-By Theo. L. Granvier, 32 Steuben agitated faces, as if fascinated by that deadly encounter record from decrease in the shemasters. River, present across the shemasters.

the throat. The panther struck him full on

"But why the deuce don't you have her up with heavy iron bars sprang into the cage, and rained blow after blow upon the panther's "No. Mark," replied the other, with fierce head. They succeeded in separating the decision; "I have pitted my will against combatants; the beast, dazed and halfthat reached my cars was the rushing and bers; and, call it obstinacy, perversity- strangled by that awful grip, was driven anything you like, but I won't budge from back into a corner, while the man rose from home considerably sobered. The rest of now, and will lost until one or other of us That Farrelli had come in for a severe mauling was only too evident. His clothes were torn into shreds, his mangled arm hung by his side, the blood flowed freely from the numerous gashes in his chest; but, standing "Perhaps so; but, my dear fellow, there erect, he faced the crowd with a fierce and are no two of us alike. After all, you must determined aspect. His angry eyes swept through the swaying throng, flitting from one white face to the other as if in search of

But the woman was gone. From that heur she passed out of his life, never to trouble him again. When he failed to discover her in the crowd, his head suddenly drooped, and he leaned heavily upon his friend Radford, who had hastened to his assistance.

"Well, Mark," he whispered, grimly, as he limped away, "she has had her revenge, you see. We are quits now; and-I forgive her!"-Strand Magazine, by permission of the International News Co.

OUR FLAG.

BY C. M. HEADLEY, TUCKERTON, N. J.

Then hoist our flag, the starry flag, And spread its colors to the breeze; O'er hill and dale, and mountain crag. And proudly on the mighty breeze For sixty million souls it waves,

And decks a myrind soldiers' graves. Our flag, our flag, an emblem this Of Liberty and Freedom's cause. Thousands in death have deemed it bliss To die for right and righteous laws, For sixty million souls it waves, And docks full many a patriot's grave.

Beneath its folds in battle strife, Amidst the roar of shot and shell, From saber's thrust and dangers rife Our soldier boys in proud devotion fell. For sixty million souls it waves, An emblem still for noknown graves,

Before our flag the tyrant foes Were driven from our glorious shores From everywhere the patriots rose, And chose in place of slavery-war. For sixty million souls it waves An emblem fit for patriots' graves.

When traitorous hearts in rage and boass Tore from its place our emblem down. There sprang at once a mighty host-There came an awful Nation's frown. For sixty million sonis it waves, An emblem meet for patriots' graves. War! war! was heard on every hand-

The cruel strife of death was long-And crimsoned was our native land With blood, and hushed our joyous song For sixty million souls it waves An emblem true for patriots' graves, Our soldier boys, brave, stanch, and true, Followed our flag where'er it led;

They bled and fought and bled. For sixty million souls it waves, And rests on many a soldler's grave. At last! At last! The battles ceased-The smoke and carnage cleared away: Through fears there came the shout of " Peace!

And 'neath the red, the white, the blue

Through darkness came a fairer day. For sixty million souls it waves And decks the known and unknown graves At dawn our flag, our starry flag, Was proudly floating to the breeze; On hill and dale, and mountain erag, O'er cities, towns, on mighty seas, For sixty million souls it waves

And decks full many a soldier's grave, Thank God, that peace, sweet peace, is ours. And pray that thus it ever be; That ever o'er this land of flowers, Of waving fields, o'er lake and sea, For sixty million souls it waves, Protecting known and unknown graves,

SOLDIERS WANTED. enterprise and pluck. Spiendid forms are here for $8 to $20 an acre. You'll find plenty of acquaintances, for old soldiers have been settling in Fayette County, Tenn., for the last two years. Nature is on our side. Come here and enjoy life and prosperity. Send your name and address for a pamphlet and further information. Southern Homesetters' Land Company, P. O. Box 30, & BRO., 32-42 Dearborn St., Chicago, II Mention The National Tribune.

Mention The National Tribuas. GGO SECOND HAND BICYCLES
All makes Must Be Closed Out, $5.00 to $25.00 each. Sond for Descriptive Line
M. W. MEAD & PRENTISS, CHICAGO, ILL. Mention The National Tribuna

Y Tou can now grasp a fortune. A new guide to rapid wealth, with 240 fine engravings, sent free to any person. This is a chance of a lifetime. Write at once. Lynn & Co. 48 Hond St. New York Mention The National Tribune.

trial is your home. Cut this out and send for catalogue. Prices to suit you. Oxford Saraing Machines awarded World's Fair Medal, Dors What any Will, Do. Pull, and OF ATTACHEMENT TRN YESS GUTANDAM PROSERT PAID. ADDRESS OXFORD MDSS. CO., 240 Wadash Ave., CHICAGO. Mention The National Tribune.

LAND WARRANTS WANTED. Address: W. E. Moses, Box 867, Denver, Colo. Mention The National Tribune.

$95 WEEKLY $5,500 yearly, no experience rescheme a new one; particulars free. Address S.S. Ware Co. Box 530S, Euston, Man. $4.50per1000 Cash for distributing circulars. Enclose Mention The National Trioune.

WANTED-ADDRESSES WANTED-By J. J. Biggs, late Captain, Co. C. 112th HL, Barmard, Kan., the address of Jos. R. Stokes, jr., of Hattery H, 1st IB. L. A., Capt. Degrees; by his brother-in-law.

Children Cry for Pitcher's Castoria.